It can only be survived with Bobby's help, because the entire town is, somehow, in on it and they are ready to mow him down. But this is no ordinary Zombie; he is already in a zombie state, which makes him much more difficult to bring down. As Bobby realizes this, he finds himself, by happenstance, in the company of a senior named John 'Bean' O'Brien and a pair of college football players, Billy and Maxie . They set off to find the source of the Zombie outbreak to fix it, while also evading the open-armed teens, who have plans of their own. The group finds themselves on the edge of the woods, and just at the edge of the woods, at the edge of the world ... These are the lists that keep on giving. The annual YouTube Music Awards (often referred to as "The Oscars of the Music World") are always a big event. This year they handed out their Creative Impact awards for this year, honoring sites that are being used to help artists and labels reach their fans. This year's winners were: MIDIhood: Named as the "creative media site of the year," MIDIhood allows fans to write their own music using only a MIDI pad. This site has been a huge boon to electronic music artists by giving them a new way to share their music. Jungle Records: Named as the "label of the year," Jungle Records is the home of the huge label owned by electronic music superstar, John Digweed. They're an excellent choice for the big new music. Dubfire: Named as the "artist of the year," Dubfire is the enigmatic and successful dance music producer, who's been producing for over 25 years. He's put out records for some of the biggest names in the business, and his forward thinking has seen him come up with some of the most creative new ways to reach his 82157476af
